CLADSTONE'S LAND SCHEME.

On Friday night Mr. Gladstone presented to Parliament his scheme for the creation of a peasant proprietary in Ireland. His Bill is to be introduced on Thursday.

the Home Rule Bill. He proposes to use £180,000,000 new three per cent. bonds during the next three years, the proceeds to be applied to the purchase of the land of such landlords as wish to sell, the land to be handed to the tenants if they wish to purchase. Power to appropriate land in congested districts is ten, but it is not sought in any case to compel the tenants to purchase. Such tenants as purchase will have to pay an annual rent sufficient to return the principal and pay interest on the sums for which they purchase. The Irish Government, it appears, is to appoint the rent collectors. A sum of £2,000,000 a year is to be paid to the perial Government by Ireland on account of these rents, which, added to the Imperial contribution, will make £6,242,000 that the Irish taxpayers will have to pay annually to Britain. Mr. Gladstone shows that at present they pay £6,380,000, and it is not clear that this includes any of the rent now paid to absentee landlords. Mr. Glad-

Mr. Chamberlain contended that the land proposals, although they had been modified since he had left the Cabinet, would still impose a great burden on Great Britain without sufficient security for the loans adanced. The Bill was calculated, not so much to benefit the tenants, as a sop for the landlords. The Government was putting on Ireland a burden which no Irish member could declare to be a fair price to give for the landlords' rights. (Cheers.) The Irish people would regard the bargain as one imposed by a foreign country, and would be

Mr. Gladstone's statement to-day of the provisions of his Irish Land Bill lacked completeness and clearness, and evoked no enthusiasm from any quarter, even the Parcellites remaining silent during its delivery.

Mr. Chamberlain's speech made a great impression. The Scotch Liberals had an informal meeting and decided to support Mr. Chamberlain unless the loan was reduced to a sum sufficient to assist in the purchase of only the smaller holdings.

Mr. Parpell said that, not having Mr. Chamberlain's advantage of a seat in the Cabinet, he was not prepared to announce

...but he was not prepared to express a confident opinion upon the merits and demerits of the scheme until he had seen the provisions of the Bill. To him it appeared that the appointment of a Receiver General was unnecessary and absurd, because, according to the previous statement, the receipts from the Customs and Excise duties in Ireland will amount to within £20,000 of the total amount payable by Ireland to the Imperial Exchequer. Would it not be sufficient security if England took a lien upon the revenue collected by Irish authority in the event of the failure of the Customs to yield a sum sufficient to meet the Imperial charges? The appointment of a Receiver general would be most offensive to Ireland, because it would show a reluctance to trust Irishmen, even for such a small sum as £20,000. The object of the Irish members was not to make the measure a party question, but by yielding as much as possible to settle, once for all, this troublesome, difficult and dangerous matter. If the Irish landlords threw out the measure he hoped the offer to assist them with English credit would not be renewed, but that the Bill for the government of Ireland would be pressed forward by itself. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. Davitt says the only persons who will benefit by the scheme will be the absentee landlords, who will jump at the
